Salam International Investment Limited (SIIL) Trusted iDen2
Digital Employee Identity Service

iDen2 launches a digital employee identity program for Salam International employees, contractors and shareholders, giving every person connected to the Company one trusted digital identity that they hold and control.

Under the program, each employee receives a verified digital identity in a personal wallet, issued by Salam International and backed by proof of who they are and the role they hold. The identity can be presented anywhere proof is needed, from entering a workplace and signing in to systems, to approving work and confirming authority to act for the Company. Paper cards, repeated document checks and shared passwords give way to a single credential that is instant to verify, hard to copy and easy to withdraw the moment a role ends.

Qatar is investing heavily in digital government, digital business and a diversified economy, and demand for trusted digital identity is growing fast across the region. iDen2 has seen significant traction in the region this year, working with partners who need identity that people own rather than identity stored in one more central database.

As part of the announcement, iDen2 confirmed it will scale its international presence by establishing a regional headquarters in Doha. The Doha headquarters will serve customers and partners across Asia and the GCC, placing product, engineering and partner teams close to the markets where adoption is moving fastest.

Alfy Louis, Founder and Chief Executive Officer of iDen2, said: "Salam International understands something many groups learn the hard way. Identity is infrastructure. When employees, contractors and shareholders each hold their own verified identity, trust stops being a process and becomes a property of every interaction. We are proud to build that with Salam, and proud to make Doha our home in the region. The traction we are seeing across the GCC and Asia tells us the region is ready to lead on digital identity, and we intend to help it do exactly that."

Abdul Salam Abu Issa of Salam International said: "Our people and our partners are the group. Giving them a secure digital identity that they hold themselves raises the standard for how we work, how we protect our business and how we serve our customers. This business relationship brings real innovation to Salam and to Qatar, in a form people will use every day. With iDen2 establishing its regional headquarters here in Doha, this is not a single project. It is the start of a long-term collaboration that brings new capability and new opportunity to the region."

The program will roll out in phases, beginning with Salam employees and extending to contractors and shareholders. Further joint initiatives in digital trust services are planned as the partnership develops.

iDen2 builds trust infrastructure for the age of AI agents. Its platform issues verifiable credentials that people hold in their own wallet and present as proof of identity, role and authority, including proof that an AI agent acting for them is authorized and still under their control. iDen2 is headquartered in the Silicon Valley, State of California, United States, with a regional headquarters in Doha serving Asia and the GCC.
